

Introduction

The Climate Financing Café aimed to provide a forum for CSOs and GCF monitors to engage and learn about climate financing issues in the nation by bringing them together with development partners, academia, and financing and government institutions assigned to environmental and climate change matters. The meeting's main topics of discussion are gender and climate change. WATED's Climate Financing Café created a platform for CSOs and GCF monitors to engage on climate financing issues, emphasizing climate change and gender. The meeting aimed to address limited understanding, lack of CSO engagement, and funding access challenges, with diverse attendees from various sectors.

Achievements: The café discussions highlighted the urgency of addressing climate finance challenges in Tanzania. Key takeaways included addressing labor challenges, fostering collaboration, and raising awareness about climate change and financing.

Challenges: included limited understanding of climate financing, insufficient CSO engagement, and obstacles in accessing funding. These challenges highlighted the need for collaborative solutions.

Opportunity: The café identified opportunities to enhance collaboration, create awareness, and address challenges in climate change and financing discussions. These opportunities can contribute to more effective climate financing initiatives in Tanzania.
